Biography

Born and raised in Missouri, Alaina earned her undergraduate degree in Anthropology before pursuing a career in law. Her anthropology studies taught her to look beyond the surface—to ask why things are the way they are—and instilled in her a deep respect and appreciation for different perspectives. She credits this foundation with shaping both her outlook on life and her approach to practicing law.

Outside the office, Alaina enjoys staying active at the gym, discovering new restaurants, honing her sewing skills, and reading. She also has a love for music and isn't shy about putting on a private concert in her apartment. A fun fact: Alaina designed and sewed the dress featured in her professional headshot.
