Biography

Will King IV is a paralegal whose legal experience spans criminal law, family law, civil litigation, and public defense. Throughout his career, he has assisted attorneys with case preparation, legal research, client communication, and litigation support, helping clients address complex legal challenges and achieve favorable outcomes.
Before entering the legal field, Will played semi-professional football for four years, an experience that strengthened his discipline, teamwork, and resilience—qualities he continues to bring to his legal work. He earned his undergraduate degree in Criminal Justice from Indiana Wesleyan University, where he developed the foundation for his passion for law and public service.
Will is passionate about helping individuals and families through difficult legal circumstances while ensuring they feel informed and supported throughout the legal process. Outside of work, he enjoys spending time with his family, participating in sports, exploring nature, and recently began pursuing bouldering as a new hobby. He is the proud father of two children, his six-year-old son, Will King V, and his newborn daughter, Ariella Emery Rose King.
